SENATOR MANDERSON'S REMARKS. A few minutes after 11 o'clock the president, Senator Manderson, rapped for order and then made a little speech. He said the convention had been called for the purpose of advancing the cause of good roads. He congratuated the cause that such a representative body could be assembled. He said that in this organization, crude as it is in its present form, there were no indications of a selfish purpose.

The agitation for good roads had been going on for some time, but it had assumed no tangible shape. Last fall it was thought wise to take advantage of the crowds at the world's fair to call a mass convention of these interested. This call a mass convention of those interested. This convention was held and then was formed what is known as the temporary organization of the National League of Good Roads. A constitution, he said, was adopted which no doubt is capable of improvement. Since then steps have been taken to establish a permanent organization and it was thought best to do that through state organizations and the delegates chosen by such organizations and the dele-gates chosen by such organizations could estab-lish a permanent organization.

The second convention was called at this time because here the national board of trade was meeting and other organizations, the members of which were interested in this subject. Senstor Manderson said that there was no need to say anything of the importance of this matter. What had already been done in the way of agitation had produced good results and there was no doubt a general interest aroused on the subject. He referred to a movement toward securing good roads leading into Omaha and also in New York state. seemed to him two directions in which the deliberations of the convention could be directed; first as to the needed legislation and secretary, and he responded in a speech nd as to the best means of carrying on the which had special reference to OR SALE 10 AND 12 PER CENT INVEST- campaign of education. He said that a bill for the appointment of a good roads commission had sed the Senate and had been reported to the House, where it was now pending.

On motion of Gen. Stone a committee on order of business consisting of Mr. Jackson of Vir. W. M. ginia, Mr. Dervey of New York, and Mr. Hamin of Maine was appointed.

THE SENATOR FROM NEW HAMPSHIRE. Senator Chandler was called on to say somebeen inaugurated. Like his two predecessors, the new governor was taking a great interest in the subject of good roads. In New Hampshire the matter was naturally connected with that of the forests. It is the desire to preserve the attractive features of the State which were admired each year by tourists and to do this not only were good roads. and to do this not only were good roads n es sary, but the destruction of the forests must be stopped in order to preserve the water courses. A rest league was estab-lished and it had taken up this matter of good roads. One change purposed by the league of his state was to do away with the custom of allowing the tax payers to work out their taxes on the roads. The result of this out their taxes on the roads did not get the full bene-sit of the money raised by taxation. The people of his state would be glad to receive suggestions from this convention. New Hampshire, he said, is ready to do its part and her representatives in Congress are ready to further any legislation that may seem to be necessary. A NATIONAL ROAD COMMISSION. He thought that one advantage for this or- Gregg Custis, chief of medical staff; Mrs. A. He was of the opinion that either a national road commission should be appointed or else the Secretary of Agriculture might structed to investigate the matter and report hospital. the needs to Congress. He assured the delegates that they would not find Congress either 418.04 was from patients, $6,528.60 from Conslow in acting or indifferent to any reasonable proposition that might be made. He quoted Secretary of State Seward as saying that you $16,000 can measure the civilization of a people by the 2,500 character of its roads. In this country we have come to depend on the railroads and have neglected one system of highways. He believed that the bicycle riders were doing a great deal to call attention to the condition of the 5.800 companies had taken the position favorable to this object. As they had caused the neglect of the highways ne thought that it was well that they should aid this work for their revival. What they wanted was to have the roads in such a condition that one could drive in a light wagon from Maine to Alaska without breaking a spoke.

The convention heartily applanded this senment, with which the Senator closed his re-

A partial report from the committee on order of business was made which recommended that the convention listen to an address from Major J. W. Powell of the Geological Survey. Major Powell was invited to ad-dress the convention and he began by alluding to the kind of roads he was familiar by alluding to the kind of roads he was familiar with in his early years in Wisconsin. Their condition was such that the farmers estimated that it cost them 25 per cent to get their grain to market. Then came the plank road era. Then the railroads brought the markets nearer. The roads fell into neglect and now all through the country they are in a very bad condition. In the geological survey they had been considering this matter. He spoke of the typographic map, which was being prepared by the survey and be distributed some sheets of portions of this new map. On a large map of the country the sections already surveyed were shown and Maj. Powell said that the new map would show the existing roads. The geographical formations were also being shown which would give information as to road materials. A good deal of interest was shown by the delegates in this map especially when Maj. Powell stated that the grade and the meander of every road would be shown. The time when the survey of the entire country was completed the major said would depend on the rapidity with which Congress appropriated money.

the trap rock as being good. He and that while lime stone crushed easily, it also packed hard, which made it desirable for road making.

He suid every rock had to be examined in THE survivors of the fifth and sixth army corps will meet at the office of Gen. Spear to-and when ground up they turned into a fine dust, which readily became mud.

A CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION Several delegates wanted to find out the avai ibility of road material in their particular locality, and Maj. Powell gave very full replies, showing a thorough knowledge of the rocks in the country. As the questions continued to be fired at him Chairman Manderson smilingly assured him that this was not civil service examination and would not be counted against him. Everybody smiled at this and when the delegates let up on the major the chairman stated that no doubt all were interested in knowing what the government was doing in the direction of making this map. He also spoke of the consular report prepared at the instance of Mr. Blaine, which gave an ac-League for Good Roads-The Topics Discount of roads in foreign countries, edition of this report had been exhau One of the most interesting meetings held in and it was proposed that a new edition be city for some time assembled this morn-printed, and he hoped that a resolution to that printed, and he hoped that a resolution seeffect would be adopted by the convention.

because of their political pull, and he found that he could not get an appointment. He formed a neighborhood association, intrusted the people in his vicinity and finally got up a petition asking for his appointment and took the petition up to the county commissioners and they were to the county commissioners and they were actually afraid not to appoint. He had been about ten years in getting the place. He also gave an account of his efforts to crush what is known locally as "nigger head" stone and his final failure. He said that there were only two features in good roads one in the money and the other in the intelligent expenditure of it. The first was best secured by the issue of bonds and the second by the appointment of competent

Mr. B. Howard Haman of Maryland said that there was a spirit of enthusiasm in Maryland on the subject of good roads. The recent convention, he thought, was due to the will of the Deer Creek Farmers' Club. Thus far they were not raided against the politicians, recognizing the fact that if the movement was weak the politicians would not bother with it, but if it was strong then the politicans would want to get on the train. They had started out by recognizing that the present condition of the roads was mainly due to the neglect on the part of citizens. They cultivated the politicians instead of abusing them. In the movement of organization they have pushed forward rapidly.

A friendly rivalry has been developed between the residents of the country and the city as to the expenditure of money. From the next legislature they hope to get some road law In concluding he told a story on himself. He said he asked a friend what he should talk about at this meeting.

"For Heaven's sake, Haman," was the emphatic response, "talk about a minute." A note was received from Secretary Rusk expressing regret that he could not attend the special invitation was extended to the Secretary

PRESS-A SENSIBLE SUGGESTION FROM A WO-MAN WRITER-MISS ANTHONY AND THE LEC-TURERS-PROGRAM FOR THIS EVENING.

When the woman suffrage convention was called to order this morning at 16:15 it was an easy matter to count the bonneted heads in Metaerott Hall. It was a good deal easier to count the men's heads, for it could have been done without getting past the fingers of one hand. In five minutes after Miss Anthony's gavel had resounded through the emptiness of the big hall another glimpse of the hall showed that it was dotted all over with both men and women, although the latter were far in the ma-

RE DISCUSSED AT THE PRESENT RESSION—
Today's sessions were very interesting. The matters under discussion brought to the surface an almost unlimited quantity of individual opinion, and representing the ways that people of different sections were looking at things kept the attention of the audience very closely

VIRGINIA'S REPRESENTATIVES. The first speaker was Mrs. Henderson Daingerfield of Virginia, who said that she was one is over ninety years of age and has been presi- of the many women suffragists in het part of the south, and she invited all the Virginians to meet with her to form an association. THE LECTURERS. This brought out a statement from Miss Susan Anthony that she had been accused of showing a preference to one lecturer above another, but that on the contrary her idea of a woman lecturer was whether or not people wanted to listen to her. Miss Lucy Anthony, who has charge of the woman's lecture bureau, said that all the engagements that she had made for Rev. Anna Shaw were personal and business matters between themselves and that she had not acted as the agent of the Suffrage

Society. Mrs. Greenleaf of New York created a little merriment by insisting that the lecturer's opinion of her own ability should not be consid as important as anything her audiences might have said of her.

Another amendment adopted last night that for the future the conventions shall be held in this city during the first session of each Conigress, and the alternate years in other cities to be selected was only lightly touched upon. It has met with general favor. THE PRESS AND THE CAUSE. Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton of Ohio made an excellent report on the work of the press committee, which was loudly applauded. In the discussion which followed each state elegation was asked to tell something of what it had done or intended doing in getting suffrage doctrine or woman's advancement along any line in the daily prints.

Mrs. Biakeley of Connecticut said that her state papers would print all the suffrage matter and one had given her a column in a weekly had to be made up in a newsy manner.

Miss Anthony said, in other words, give them an ounce of fact, not pounds of theory-news, and not philosophy.

Miss Doolittle of the District association said it ought to be somebody's business to prepare once a week some suffrage items for circulation

Mrs. Chamberlain of Florida, Mrs. Dubose of Georgia said the papers in their section were pretty liberal in space unless a pressure of advertising forbid. This too in face of the fact that sometimes suffrage doctrine did their readers either.

Mrs. Loag of Illinois thought the women in her state recognized that the press was the Corliss engine of modern society and they had Corliss engine of modern society and they had not lost any opportunities to keep up the steam on suffrage matters.

Mrs. Waugh of Indiana, a young woman of charming address, told about a literary and suffrage society in Tiflin, her town, which was divided in membership and officers equally between the sexes. At first it was not intended that men should hold office, but they had behaved so docile that they gladly sleeted, them to high so docile that they gladly elected them to high places. At the meetings suffrage doctrines are given in homeopathic doses, but continu ously, and a report of their meetings is always provided and always printed in the daily papers.

Mrs. Seiger told how her tactics has brought all the big dailes in Toledo in the suffrage procession.

She said it was The last word, full of wisdom as an egg is of meat, came from Clara Quigley Murphy, editor of the Woman's Recorder, Toledo, Ohio. She told the delegates that newspapers wanted news, live stuff, as newspapers call it, and it did not need essays. She advised everybody to boil down and extract the news from all they would write and then it would have some show to get printed.

AUXILIARY SOCIETIES. Reports of presidents of auxiliary state societies were made by Miss Laura Clay of Kentucky, Mr. Henry B. Blackwell of Massachusetts in place of Lucy Stone, his wife, whose health would not allow her to come, and Mrs. Lavinia Hatch for the Massachusetts general society.

Considerable unfinished business—the reports of Kansas, Minnesota and Montana—were deferred till the afternoon session, when Miss Anthony adjourned the convention at 12:30 At the afternooon session the report of the

At the afternoon session the report of the Kansas constitutional campaign committee, written by Laura M. Johns, was read by Miss Broderick.

This young lady made an interesting personage on the platform among her elders in the cause. She has a slight, graceful figure and fair hair, framing an attractive and most intelligent face. She is the daughter of Representative Broderick of Kansas and admits that she is old enough to vote, for she has voted, as all good woman citizens of her state are entitled to do at the municipal elections. She has had her chance to help elect the mayor, members of the school board and other municipal officers. There is not any suffrage society in her town of Holton, but, with her sister, she is generally in the lead of all suffrage affairs all over her state.

The regular afternoon program was reports of auxiliary state societies. There were re-

Our lines penetrate rough countries, but have never been held up except once just outside of New Orleans. When a messenger yields to temptation and roos us we generally recover the money unless he sees a lawyer first, And we wonder which will conquer in the worldand then the lower gets it. In the case of the messenger who stole packages of bank notes containing $50,000, which he threw off in potato sack at Davenport, Iowa, we ap-prehended him before the attorneys caught him and recovered the packages intact. This thief hunting is expensive business, but it costs the company nothing, for Miss Spiggins (who doesn't tike Clara's the employes themselves pay it under a new system inaugurated by our company and the American Express Com any. In the case of Surra L. Richards agt. Thomas

A slightly built, wiry, muscular young man in a light overcoat and slik hat leaned against the office counter of the Metropolitus Hotel this morning. The average man, in sising him up, would not consider him a formidable antagonist. Everybody in the athletic world is familiar with the name of John Igelstroem, champion awordsman of the country, and who held this enviable title in France and Germany for three years. He halls from Winston, N. C., and is a commercial traveler. He was educated abroad, spent three years at Heidelburg University and has fought scores of students duels, held his own against the best swordsmen in Europe, and has seventy-four medals to testify to his shill with the foils. "Fencing," he said to Tuz Star representative, "is taking the place on the calendar of athletics in this country which it deserves, and the best clubs and schools of athletics are devoting their attention to it more than ever. It is an art far removed from the brutality that distinguishes or rather degrades boxing. I am surprised that Americans do not devote themselves more enthusiastically to it. It is, however, becoming very popular in the large cities, and as an exercise, refined yet vigorous, I know of none that excel it."

During the twenty-four hours ending at necession today burial permits were issued from the health office for the following: White—Emily Boyle, 69 years; Fishback, 61 years; Eliza H. Deitz Wm. G.
